CONVENTION OF
POLICE OFFICERS

A convention of the police officers of Ogdenville was held in the courtroom of the city jail building yesterday afternoon and was attended by all members of police patrolmen and detectives.

Chief of Police Thomas E. Browning acted as chairman of the meeting and the officers were in session for more than two hours.

The calling of these meetings was inaugurated about two years ago and has proved so beneficial that the sessions are now held regularly every three months. The meetings are very similar to those now held by many large and up-to-date corporations, the officers being given a chance to express their own views and receive the benefit of suggestions from others.

At the opening of the session Chief Browning made a few brief remarks, explaining to the assembled officers and particularly to the newly-appointed officers, the responsibility they had taken upon their shoulders. He said the duties of their position were varied and difficult and that the trust was placed in them was a heavy one.

The chief explained to them that their acts would at all times be subject to the observation and criticism of the public and that on the contrary they pursued their duties not only for the welfare of the community, but also the credit of the department to which they belonged. Depending also on this course was their own success as officers and men.

He advised them that in police business their character was their capital and the men were admonished by their chief to deal honorably with all persons and to hold their word sacred, no matter when, where or to how it was given.

Probation Officer Jacobs addressed the officers on the subject of the curfew law and asked the police to assist him in the enforcement of the ordinance. They were all well pleased with the officer's remarks. Others made interesting remarks at the meeting were Chief of Detectives Jas. Pender and Captain of Police C. C. Brown. Following these talks the chief invited a general discussion, in which all of the officers took part.

FAVOR COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT FOR OGDEN

MEMBERS OF WEBER CLUB ARE UNANIMOUS IN THE PLAN
AND ADOPT RESOLUTIONS URGING IMMEDIATE ACTION BY THE LEGISLATURE.

RESOLUTION

That we, as members of the Weber club, endorse and approve what is known as a "Commission Form of Government" for cities of Utah, and respectfully ask our representatives in the legislature to support a bill drafted for this purpose, which will give such a government to Ogdenville.

An interesting meeting of the Weber club members Saturday night the subject of the "Commission Form of Government" was discussed and the members adopted and gave to the board of directors of the city of Ogdenville, the honor of being the first city in the intermountain country to declare in favor of a commission form of government.

The meeting was attended by three of the Weber county representatives in the state legislature and in addition to declaring themselves in favor of the general plan, all pledged themselves to support a bill which will give Ogdenville the right to adopt the new form of municipal government.

Great Enthusiasm at Meeting.
The movement progressed with such impetus that there is every reason to believe Ogdenville will soon adopt the new system. Having secured the unanimous approval of the plan as presented in the state legislature, a committee of five was appointed to work out the details of a bill to be introduced in the legislature and this committee will complete its task with all possible speed, submitting its plan to another general meeting of the club.

Assured Success for Plan.
If the unanimous opinion of the representative citizens of the city carries any weight with the general public, commission government for Ogdenville is assured. The members of the plan in Des Moines, Ia., Galveston, Texas, and a hundred other cities of the United States, went a long way toward influencing the Weber club members in their action of last night.

Each Driggs, superintendent for the State School, and the deaf and blind, was chosen chairman of the meeting and Secretary I. L. Reynolds presided in his official capacity. After stating the object of the meeting Chairman Driggs called upon the members present to express their views on the subject.

Mayor William Glassman told of the meeting of the city councilmen on the previous night and voiced his own approval of the plan.

According to one who has made considerable investigation of the plan for what he terms a "model form of city government," the system is looked upon as the best of the kind. J. C. Nye, who has visited various Eastern cities which have adopted the plan. He told of spending a week in Des Moines, Kan., was the latest city to declare for the new municipal government.

Nye on the Des Moines Plan.
"In Des Moines I found that the plan was giving complete satisfaction," said Mr. Nye. "There is an improvement in the department, especially in the street department, where better work is accomplished at a great saving. They have a model police department in which the men receive their position on merit and not by 'pull.' There is no place for the 'ward-heeler' or 'flim-flammer.' I can not see why a city should not receive the same amount of service for its money as an individual."

Will Need Special Bill.
The local process necessary to the bringing about of the new form of city government was explained by ex-Senator Charles R. Hollingsworth. He said the trouble two years ago over the passage of the necessary act arose over the fact that the constitution of Utah is such that the legislature can not adopt a measure providing a special charter (this meaning a new form of city government) for any one city of the state. He said cities of 30,000 or over are regarded as cities of the first class, those between 10,000 and 30,000 are cities of the second class, and all those under 10,000 are cities of the third class.

It will therefore be necessary to change the former bills which were introduced to include cities of the first and second class or re-class the cities so that Ogdenville will be included with Salt Lake City in the first class. The laws of other states, explained the ex-senator, permitted the legislature to adopt measures giving any one city a special charter. He proposed that three commissioners be elected on the rotary plan—one to serve two years, another four years and the third two years and in case the plan proved successful in this city, the measure could be rearranged to take in other cities of the state.

Many Cities Adopt Plan.
"More than one hundred cities have adopted the plan," continued Mr. Hollingsworth, "and within the next six months fifty or sixty more will vote on the proposition. I predict that before the end of the present year there will be one hundred and fifty cities in the country governed by the commission system."

Chairman Driggs then called upon Dr. Dickinson for his views as a member of the city council. "I have never studied the commission plan," said the alderman, "but I have studied the present system and will say it certainly can be improved upon. I believe three men would be sufficient to handle the city's affairs. You will be able to pay three men larger salaries and thereby cut water more. The commission system would put all their time into the work and I believe that the city would be vastly better off under such a system."

Cites the Galveston Plan.
"From the business point of view," said A. T. Wright, "I believe that the plan is a good thing. It has proven successful in the county affairs and I can see no reason why the affairs of the city could not be handled in a like manner."
O. B. Gilson stated that he had been strongly in favor of the new system for some time past, citing as his example the city of Galveston, where, he claimed, they were getting 45 per cent more efficiency for the money expended. He stated also that the plan is

PREVENT SPREAD OF CONTAGION

That every precaution is being taken by the Ogdenville City Board of Health to prevent the threatened epidemic of smallpox in this city is evidenced by the fact that Sanitary Inspector Moroni Poulter has visited every person who is believed to have been exposed to the disease as a result of the Lawson funeral and has urged them to take every precaution tending to prevent a spread of the infection.

The names of every person in attendance at the funeral have been learned by the board and these people will be closely watched during the next ten or fifteen days. While the board is of the opinion that the alarm has been somewhat magnified, the members nevertheless believe that it will be little short of a miracle if a case of smallpox is not developed during the time the funeral of the Lawson child.

Inspector Poulter spent all day yesterday in making a careful investigation of smallpox cases in the city, and was unable to discover any of the cases in this city. There are at present six families in quarantine, but four of these will be released this week.

THE ORPHEUM.

Joseph Hart's "Bathing Girls," a refined, classy and spectacular act, is one of the offerings at the Orpheum this week. The name of Joseph Hart, as the producer of musical acts, is like the word "sterling" in silver, it guarantees the best. Glenwood White and Albertine Benson, with six singing girls are the high-class entertainers who carry the act through to success. The act is presented in a unique and original manner, through with a snap and a whirl. The closing scene is most spectacular, representing the bathing girls in the surf. The performers are clever; the musical numbers are catchy; the costumes are beautiful and the scenic effects are complete in every detail.

Miss Hilda Thomas and Lou Hall present an act, "The Substitute," that is a scream. There is not much to the act, but it is those who do it and from start to finish this class of act is a real treat to the audience. When called upon by the chairman he said:

"I have devoted much time to gathering information and I believe it to be the ideal system of city government. I did all I could, too, and four years ago, when the matter was before the state legislature and would like to have a bill introduced at this legislature and would like to see Ogdenville adopt the plan."

"Personally, I am in favor of five commissioners, believing that it is safer and that the biggest corporation in Weber county should have the best mode of government possible. I also favor high-salaried men as members of this commission."

In conclusion, Mr. Lewis introduced the subject which was later taken up by Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Allison regarding the legal status of the matter. During this discussion Senator George J. Kelly arrived. Before submitting the resolution to a vote, Chairman Driggs called upon the legislator.

Senator Kelly Expresses Views.
"I am in favor of the general plan," said Mr. Kelly, "but as in the details I am not yet prepared to say. I would feel that before voting for such a measure that I should like to know the number of commissioners, their salary, whether they were to be elected at large or from representative districts. I am prepared to approve of the general plan, however."

Just before the vote was taken on the resolution, Mr. Lewis read a letter from Mayor A. L. Matthias, of Des Moines, in which it was stated that Des Moines did not adopt the Galveston plan, but a more advanced and improved form of municipal government by commissioners.

The Committee.
After the favorable action on the resolution it was moved that the chairman appoint a committee of five to work out the details of the plan, and it was amended that Mr. Nye be made the chairman of the committee. After an adjournment, Chairman Driggs announced the members of the committee, who were A. T. Wright, William Glassman, Charles R. Hollingsworth and John S. Lewis. A call for another meeting will be issued when this committee is ready to make its report.

GOVERNOR SPRY
AT TABERNACLE

A declaration in favor of a broader and more hospitable relationship between the Latter Day Saints and their fellowmen, regardless of their sectarian affiliations, and the statement that Weber county is less disturbed by strife than any other section of the Mormon state, were features of an excellent address delivered by Governor William Spry at the Ogdenville tabernacle yesterday afternoon.

Throughout his entire discourse the governor did not deviate in the slightest from the subject of religion, never referring even by the slightest mention to those questions of public policy which the threatened epidemic of the state are taking more or less interest. That the address was interesting and well received is very apparent in the fact that the state executive commanded the strictest attention of his audience during the hour in which he occupied the platform.

The large number of people who evidenced a desire to hear the address of the governor composed one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled at the tabernacle. Every available seat was occupied and many were forced to turn away from the doors, being unable to secure even standing room space.

A program of specially-prepared musical numbers was rendered by soloists and the vocal choir, under the direction of Professor Joseph Ballantyne. This program was a most pleasing feature of the meeting and won for the leaders and members of the choir the well-deserved praise of the state executive, who stated that he could not worship God more fully than to sit and listen to the excellent music.

The invocation was offered by President L. F. Shurtliff, after which Governor Spry, in his opening remarks, the governor stated that he deemed it a pleasure to meet with the saints of Weber county, particularly those who were present, and to hear the voice of God. In part, he continued:

"I have always been a believer in the faith of the Latter Day Saints and particularly those who have the testimony in their hearts. I believe that the word 'sterling' in silver, it guarantees the best. Glenwood White and Albertine Benson, with six singing girls are the high-class entertainers who carry the act through to success. The act is presented in a unique and original manner, through with a snap and a whirl. The closing scene is most spectacular, representing the bathing girls in the surf. "A BROKEN IDOL"

Dainty girls with fairly good voices, classy costumes and some scenic effects which would be hard to improve upon, go to make up the really creditable features of "A Broken Idol," which was seen at the Ogdenville tabernacle last night.

Miss Perle Bari, as Marion Pugsley, is certainly one member of the cast who should be retained. She is a dainty little miss with considerable vocal ability and makes her greatest hit in the scene incident to "Love Makes the World Go Round."

The scene at the conclusion of the first act and introducing the living dragon in one of the prettiest settings ever seen at the Ogdenville tabernacle are very elaborate and pleasing. The first act of "A Broken Idol" presents Chinatown, Los Angeles, during the Chinese New Year celebration, and affords ample opportunity for Oriental splendor. The action of the second act takes place in an aristocratic home in San Monica, California, of course, the presence of some elaborate scenery. The effective staging of the production is its greatest resource.

Joe Coster is operated upon; condition serious.

OGDEN WOMAN
POSES AS MAN

The happenings which caused a woman to don her sex, don man's attire and become a common vagrant in the hope of locating her unfaithful husband are declared by Mrs. F. F. Wilson, now under arrest in Denver, to have taken place in Ogdenville a year ago last June.

According to a Denver newspaper, the case is most unusual because of the fact that the woman, now under the alias of Bert Lang, rode the bumpers of freight trains, split railroad ties and even acted as bartender. Ever since she left this city more than a year ago with the determination to locate her errand husband, she has roamed from place to place throughout the West, working with all classes of men at the hardest kind of labor.

The woman's duplicity was not discovered until a few days ago, when she was arrested and sentenced to 30 days on a vagrancy charge. It was when the county jailer at Denver was about to search the supposed man that Mrs. Wilson disclosed her real identity.

"I'm not going to strip before all these men," because of the woman was Mrs. Wilson's first declaration regarding her real sex. She then told the following story to a Denver newspaper man:

"Well, I'll tell you: I married F. F. Wilson in Denver, went to work for him. We worked hard together and saved our money. We bought a home and were getting along fine when he mortgaged our home and ran away with another woman. This was in Ogdenville, Utah, a year ago last June. I was determined to find him and make him suffer for treating me like he did. I went down town and bought a suit of men's clothes, had my hair cut and started out to find my husband."

"I went my way on a freight train to Wyoming and when I was up against it, went to work stripping railroad ties. I got in a little trouble up there with a man over some money. I engaged an attorney, and after the thing was settled, he told me that I was a woman. But I called his bluff, and he never said another word."

"I then beat my way to Montana and worked there as a dishwasher for a while. Then I went to Idaho. I found a man, shaved my head and did a man's work. I could not locate my husband up in that country and I beat it into Denver. I rode the rods, the blind baggage, the top of passenger trains and in box-cars."

"I looked for my husband here, but was unable to find him. I got a job shoveling sand and doing laboring work, but it was pretty hard on me. Then I got a job selling hot tamales. I kept this up for seven months, and nearly all of the time I sold at Seventeenth and Market streets."

"How did you manage to work with the men all the time without being detected," she was asked.

"I studied the men I worked with, and soon acted just as they did. I started to smoke like them, then I got a pipe, but that was more for a bluff."

"Have you been out of work long?" asked the reporter.

"No, I was working all the time. Later I have been washing dishes at the New Western hotel, Twelfth and Larimer streets. I went into a saloon with a man, and we had a few glasses of beer. I was nearly drunk when the con got me. I was a little worried when the judge gave me ninety days, as I did not know how I was going to get by the men over there. I have never been in the county jail, but when they told me to take my clothes off I had to tell the truth."

"I was getting tired of masquerading as a man, and I am glad they have found me out. I wanted to give myself up several times lately. The work was getting too hard for me, and I could not keep up with the other men. I am 44 years old now, and the hard work I have done in the past two years is telling on me."

"I was in one fight, and that was in a saloon. I got hit over the head with a glass. You can feel the cut yet. I got so strong enough to battle with men."

"Why did you always hang around with the lawless class of men in the lower part of the city?" Mrs. Wilson was asked.

"Because my husband was a booze-fighter, and I was in hopes of finding him in some of the saloons."

Mrs. Wilson weighs only 130 pounds. She has sharp brown eyes, and is tanned from her outdoor life. She said that she will still be on the lookout for her husband when I get out of here."

"I will still be on the lookout for my husband when I get out of here," she said, "and if I find him I will make him suffer as much as I have in the past eighteen months."

When questioned concerning the case the police were unable to recall any instance of an F. F. Wilson leaving his wife and eloping with another woman, but the case may never have been brought to the attention of the officials.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT A WATT IS?

For the benefit of the lady who does not always turn off the light every time she is through with it, and also for the party who says that the meter is right in the summer, but wrong in the winter, and for some others, I am to explain how this mysterious and silent messenger of life and power, coming from the clouds and the water wheel, speeds backward and forward over the wires and through your lamps 7200 alternations every minute of time.

The word "Watt" is the mechanical and electrical unit of the measurements of power named after its inventor, an English mechanic.

An incandescent lamp with a carbon filament uses 3 1/2 watts of electricity every hour for each candle of light given. We will now substitute the word "Pound" in place of "Watt," since every one will know the money value of a pound of meat and butter better than they do the money value of the watt.

We will now say that an Edison carbon lamp uses 3 1/2 pounds worth of current per hour for each candle of light produced, therefore a 16 candle power lamp will use 3 1/2 times 16, or 56 pounds per hour.

The new Tungsten Lamp does much better than this; only requiring 1 1/4 pounds for each candle of light given, therefore a 16 candle Tungsten uses 20 pounds per hour instead of 56 pounds as is required by the Edison Lamp.

EXAMPLE.
1 16 C. P. Edison Lamp uses 56 Watts in one hour, in 1,000 hours it will use 56,000 Watts, costing$5.60
To which we add the price of the lamp25

1 40 Watt 25 C. P. Tungsten in 1,000 hours uses 40,000 Watts, costing$4.00
To which we add the price of the lamp75

.....$4.75
.....$1.10

All of which means that you have saved $1.10 on the life of one lamp and used a 40 Watt 25 candle Tungsten instead of a 16 candle, 20 Watt Edison.
